The page title is "Caste Transformation, Intracultural Communication, and Social Structure Dynamics in Kei Society, Southeast Maluku-Indonesia". The article is published in the Journal of Ecohumanism, Volume 3, No. 4, pp. 673-688, ISSN: 2752-6798 (Print) | ISSN: 2752-6801 (Online). The author is Muhammad Yamin Rumra<sup>1</sup>. The abstract discusses the system of social stratification and intracultural communication in the Kei people of Southeast Maluku, Indonesia, which is based on centuries-old caste traditions. The findings show that Kei people use language and cultural symbols to reinforce their caste position, while modernization and electoral politics open space for changes in social dynamics. The result of this study provides insights into how local communities adapt to modernization and democratization while maintaining traditional cultural structures. The implications of this study underscore the importance of understanding the dynamics of intracultural communication in the context of social stratification to maintain social order and promote inclusiveness in the social development of Kei society.
